Fargo, N. D., Nov. 14.—Dennis plans to contest the result of the recall election, in North Dakota, October 25, when Nonpartisan league endorsed state officials were ousted apparently have been formulated by a group of taxpayers affiliated with the league it was learned today.

An appeal sent out from over the signature of Geo. D. Laird requests individual contributions of $100 for a contest fund. The appeals were sent to many leagues in this part of the state according to non-league circles today.

The contest according to an article printed in the Fargo Forum today would be based first on the sufficiency of the total number of recall signatures and second the right of persons who did not vote for Governor in the last election to sign them. Those sponsoring the movement for the contest contend that many signatures on the recall petition are duplicated and are those of persons not legal voters in the state. It is also maintained that persons who did not vote for Governor in the last general election were not qualified to sign the petition.

S. E. Lusworth of Limestone and Edward S. Miller of Minot will represent the Nonpartisan in the contest of the election. It is understood Mr. Lusworth and Mr. Miller were in Bismarck Saturday afternoon. Both looked over petitions filed in the secretary of state's office.

The evidence gathered by the Attorney-General's office on the matter of duplication of names is now in the Fargo office of the league according to Mr. Lusworth.

Nelson A. Mason, secretary of Governor Frazier declared that the defeated officials had no part in Mr. Laird's action. He said that Mr. Laird wired from Devils Lake, his home, and that his action was taken without consulting the state officials.

'FRISCO COURTMotion Picture Comedian Answers Charge of Manslaughter in Rappe Case

MANSLAUGHTER IS CHARGE

Murder Charge Dropped After Comedian Spent 16 Days in Jail Without Bail

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle motion picture comedian went to trial today on a charge of manslaughter growing out of the death of Miss Virginia Rappe motion picture actress Sept. 3. Scores of witnesses on both sides awaited the call to the stand.

Arbuckle, a well known comedian, will have for 15 days accused of the murder of the girl until Police Judge (Nathan J. Lavin) reduced the charge to manslaughter and allowed him his freedom on $1000 bail. Miss Rappe's death came from a ruptured bladder which she sustained at a drinking party she attended in Arbuckle's suite at the Hotel St. Francis the afternoon of Sept. 3. On this occasion according to testimony in the police court hearing Arbuckle and Lowell Sherman another moving picture actor were clothed in dress suits and pajamas and while Arbuckle wore his pajamas and Sherman wore his pajamas and a nightgown.

Found in Distress
When Miss Rappe retired from the room while the festivities were in progress according to the testimony Arbuckle followed her and about an hour later two of the women, Mrs. (Mont) and Zey Prevoist found her in distress in an adjoining room the door of which was opened by Arbuckle in response to their knocks.

Arbuckle told her to shut up or he would throw her out of the window, they said and used force in an attempt to restore her fully to consciousness. Miss Rappe was taken to another room in the hotel and next day removed to a hospital where she remained until her death. Hospital nurses testified at the inquest that she accused Arbuckle of having injured her, but this testimony was not introduced at the police court hearing.

Murder Charge Dismissed
Nothing was shown at the preliminary hearing according to Judge Lazarus to connect Arbuckle with the charge of murder which was brought under the California statute providing that a life taken in rage or attempted rape is murder. Judge Lazarus declared however that Arbuckle's conduct warranted holding him for manslaughter as he might have committed battery.

A grand jury indictment for manslaughter also was returned against Arbuckle, although District Attorney Matthew A. Brady chose to try the defendant on the police court holding. The coroner's jury charged him with manslaughter.

Arbuckle's arrest later by prohibition officials on a charge of illegal possession of liquor was another incident in the case resulting from an investigation which the prohibition authorities laid before the federal grand jury. The liquor at the party was brought from Canada by a bootlegger which operated on a large scale, officials said.

Gavin McNab, a prominent San Francisco attorney is chief of counsel for Arbuckle. He was retained by motion picture interests to handle the defense.

DIPHTHERIA IN
WILTON CAUSE OF PRECAUTIONS

Wilton, N. D., Nov. 14.—The Wilton school building was thoroughly fumigated on advice of the health board. A force of people swept scrubbed and cleaned the building from garret to cellar with the view of trying to destroy the diphtheria germs and attempt to hold the disease in check.

This move was taken on the advice of Health Officer Dr. R. C. Thompson and County Red Cross Nurse Miss Charlotte Longstad. Miss Longstad has been assisting the local authorities in stamping out diphtheria in Wilton and is spending part of this week in the school examining the pupils.

The cases which have developed so far are of a mild nature but every precaution is being taken. Some difficulty is being experienced in some cases by people who do not care to follow the instructions of the authorities but unless every one insists the health officer Wilton may have an epidemic.

torney, Succumbs

John E. Greene of Minot, former president of the state bar association and lately its secretary-treasurer was found dead in bed Sunday according to word received here today. Mr. Greene was well known in Bismarck and throughout the state.

Heart failure is understood to have been the cause of his death. Mr. Greene was about 40 years of age and had been in North Dakota since territorial days. MILLIONS IN FILMS AWAIT TRIAL RESULT

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—On trial with Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle are several million dollars worth of movie films.

Four or five nameless rolls are shelved awaiting a verdict that will either free them to the public gaze or hold them prisoner under a sentence of public condemnation. A dozen other rolls already are on the market either under partial or total ban. And many contemplated reels may or may not be filmed.

Hence the intense interest of certain powerful movie magnates in the outcome of the Arbuckle trial.

Putting the matter in cold business terms here is a several million dollar asset threatening to become worthless property.

Hence also the delicate task that lies in the hands of the defense lawyers. Not only must they see to it that Arbuckle is acquitted, but he must be restored to public favor.

Seldom have lawyers been given so fragile a task. In the background move the active figures of film interested agents.

Lou Anger, manager for Arbuckle has been constantly in touch with every move and sits in conference with the defense lawyers.

The film interests with fortunes tied up in Fatty's films, it is said will take from their coffers a considerable portion of the fund used in the defense. It is known that they retained Gavin McNab as chief of the defense staff.

Whether McNab intends putting Arbuckle on the stand in his own defense is not yet known.

PLAN BASIS FOR PARLEY

American Officials Do Not Believe That it Will Be Flatly Rejected

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—Great Britain's acceptance "in principle" of American proposals for limitation naval armament definitely forecast today in a statement on behalf of the British delegation. The acceptance would be based on what is described as "certain definite modifications."

Japan's acceptance "in principle" at least been forecast by statement of Baron Admiral Kata and others.

Washington, Nov. 14.—With the next general session of the limitation of armaments scheduled for tomorrow, the various delegations hoped to agree today on at least a tentative program for procedure.

For the purpose of arranging preliminary details two important meetings were to be held during the day, one this morning to discuss the program for armament negotiations, the other this afternoon to shape up procedure for the forthcoming discussion of the Far Eastern questions.

A meeting of the American advisory committee of 21 also has been called for this afternoon at which Chairman Southernland will announce the personnel of the six sub-committees authorized to handle special subjects before the conference.

U. S. Is Encouraged
Preliminary to further conference sessions delegates today continued their study of Secretary Hughes proposal for the immediate reduction of the British and United States and Japanese fleets and for a ten-year naval holiday. While the spokesmen for Great Britain and Japan continued to confine themselves to guarded comments the American delegation was encouraged by the attitude of representatives of the other two powers, confident that there was at least no possibility of a flat rejection of the plan and that it would form the basis of whatever agreement is reached.

U. S. Sacrifices Cruisers
Naval officers in discussing the proposal emphasized as an outstanding feature the fact that the United States would be left without battle cruisers while Japan and Great Britain would each retain four of these ships, the newest addition to capital fighting craft.

By suggesting such a program it appears that the United States sought to convey concrete assurance of the selfish purpose with which it has entered the conference as declared by President Harding in his opening address.

BULLDOG, TIGER IN GRID FIGHT IN EAST TODAY

Annual Meeting of Yale and Princeton Teams Takes Place

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 12.—The second of the eastern football classics for the season of 1921 was played in the Yale Bowl here this afternoon when the eleven of Princeton and Yale met in their annual struggle. Dating back to 1873 the annual gridiron battle between the two famous universities is so surrounded and entwined with varsity and football tradition that, with the possible exception of the Harvard-Yale contest, it exceeds in interest from an eastern standpoint any other game of the year. Year in and year out, regardless of whether the two teams are of exceptional power or merely mediocre in comparison with other college teams of the same section, the battle of the Bulldog and the Tiger famed in song and story, attracts record attendance. Each fall the Palmer Memorial Stadium, at Princeton, or the Yale Bowl here, as the case may be, is taxed to capacity and thousands of applications for tickets are returned for lack of seats. Today's game is no exception for the huge football amphitheater of the Blue was sold out for weeks and tickets would command many a hundred per cent premium were they available to the speculators.

FORKS LEGION TEAM WINNER

It was a real football contest. Fans who had expected to see the former stars weaken and drop out of the contest before the time was up were pleasantly disappointed. The players fought a real brand of football throughout the contest.

The score at the end of the first half was 24 to 5. It will be remembered that last year Hazen scored more points than any other North Dakota team and George Elliott is again coaching the Hazen team this year. Adolph Smith was the star of the evening making 22 points for his team. Tubert Stoelting and Robert Staley at guards did wonderful work. Art Young from Carson high showed up well for his first game. The score at the end of the game was 46 to 14. Well Known Local Man To Enter Business Field

In other columns of this issue, announcement is made of the entrance of Walter W. McMahon, into the typewriter sales and repair business, with offices at 207 Fifth Street (Annex Hotel), this city. He will deal in and have the exclusive distribution of L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriters, one of the leading machines on the market, and will be equipped to deliver expert repair work on all other makes.

Mr. McMahon came here in January, 1910, and has since been a continuous resident of Bismarck, where he has gained a noteworthy record on the typewriter. During practically every session of the legislature, in many public hearings, in investigations, and court cases, he has served when most exacting typewriting prerequisites were necessary. Upon the installation of the Associated Press P. N. T. circuit at the Tribune office, in 1915, Mr. McMahon was called upon to do the receiving on the typewriter, a feat which required exceptional speed and accuracy. In this work he used the L. C. Smith typewriter, in which he will deal. Prior to his work at the Tribune Office, he was chief clerk of the local U. S. Land Office, and is now Registrar of the Provident Life Insurance Company of this city.

It is with the intent to establish in this city an up-to-the-minute typewriter office where the public may have the utmost confidence in both the machine and the service that Mr. McMahon has decided to sever his connections with the Insurance Company and engage in the typewriter business in its complete detail. His experience covers sixteen years of actual and practical work with the typewriter, and he has a wide acquaintance in the territory to be covered.

FARM PRODUCTS LAG BEHIND IN PRICE CHANGES

Lack of Organization to Keep in Touch with Change in Events is Reason

COST FIGURES ARE GIVEN

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 14.—Prices for farm products continue to lag behind prices on other groups of commodities and one important reason for this condition is the lack among farmers of commodity organizations to keep in close touch with production figures, with other prices, and with the demand for farm products. Commodity organization among farmers can do much to stabilize production, and to eliminate risk to growers, stated Rev. E. Willard, farm economist, Agricultural College, today, in commenting upon the relation between prices for farm products and other commodities as revealed in recent price statistics.

"Take the index numbers for commodity prices during September in the United States and October prices on farm products are still more depressed—figuring the 1913 prices at 100. Farm products in September stood at the bottom of the groups with a price index number of 122, or 12 percent of the 1913 prices. Cloth and clothing prices stand at 187, fuel and light at 178, building materials 193, and household furnishings 221. Figuring on the basis of all crops their purchasing power is 69 percent of what it was in 1913. Building materials, metal, fuel and light increased in purchasing power from 1920 to 1921 over their purchasing power during 1913. During September cotton prices increased from 109 to 149—figuring 1913 prices at 100, corn dropped somewhat as did steers and hogs, wheat increased from 142 to 149, eggs went up, milk held its place, and while potatoes decreased from 304 to 250, their price could be considered very good, relatively, in comparison to other prices.

"Farm labor costs are still 38 percent over the 1913 level, despite the fact that they have dropped from 219 to 138 from 1920 to 1921—figuring the 1913 level at 100. During 1920 the acre cost of raising wheat was 112 percent above the 1913 figure in Minnesota, so federal statistics show. Potato production costs were 125 percent above 1913 costs, according to figures for New York, and hog costs were 6 percent above the 1913 level. The wheat crop in 1921 was 17 percent greater than in 1913, and has been greater each year since 1913. Beef cattle have increased 19 percent since 1913, with railroad tonnage showing an increase of 16 percent since 1913, as a comparison.

Every group of commodities with the possible exception of metals is relatively higher than farm products in prices," Mr. Willard explained, and one reason for this condition is the high point of efficiency among the commodity producers in lines other than farming. They are able to calculate fairly definitely what the demand for their product will be, and they do not produce in excess of what will bring a reasonable profit above the cost of production. Farmers' production is largely unorganized and haphazard in this regard.

"J. C. R." IN VISIT TO DICKINSON

Dickinson, N. D., Nov. 14.—"J. C. R." is back. The mystery man of the northwest whose sensational attempt in the courts to establish his identity as J. Allen Caldwell son of J. H. Caldwell, former Stark county rancher, and to claim the J. Allen Caldwell property, was watched with interest over the entire nation, arrived in Dickinson Wednesday.

The mystery man landed here after an extended trip through the western states, making his living as usual, by begging.

It will be remembered that his former wife, now Mrs. L. D. Blue, picked him up in the west last summer and took him to her Duluth home. The surroundings evidently didn't appeal to "J. C. R." for he soon became afflicted with the wanderlust and left to resume his old "vocation."

Tuberculosis Death Rate Is Reduced

New York, Nov. 14.—The reduction of the tuberculosis death rate to 114 per 100,000, recently announced by the U. S. Bureau of the Census, is equivalent to a saving of more than $9,000,000 in this country during the current year as contrasted with the tuberculosis death rate of 15 years ago, according to a statement issued by the National Tuberculosis Association today.

In 1905 the death rate from tuberculosis was about 192 per 100,000. By 1910 it had declined to 160; in 1915 it was 146. There was a slight increase in 1917 and 1918, but in 1919 there was a sharp drop to 126 and in 1920 to 114. Reports received at headquarters of the National Tuberculosis Association indicate that the death rate for 1921 is still decreasing and will probably be lower than the one in 1920, which is the lowest on record.

MOTOR LIBRARY HELPS FARMERS

Dodge Brothers Business Car
Finds New Usefulness

Not so many years ago you heard the argument that the automobile was destined to monopolize people's time, that they would have no more leisure hours for reading and that the nation would consequently degenerate below its present standard of culture.

Since then, of course, it has been proved pretty definitely that exactly the reverse is true. The automobile saves such an enormous amount of time that people have more opportunity than ever to read. There is no danger that the motor car and culture will ever conflict.

As a matter of fact, there are a number of librarians in the country today who will tell you that the automobile is helping them introduce traces of culture into communities that would otherwise fail to develop an appetite for books for years to come. These librarians are taking their books to the farm—by automobile. They are introducing the motorized library, and the success which has attended their efforts indicates that it is one of the certain American institutions of the future.

Particular success with the motorized library is found in the case of Noblesville, Ind., a city of about 5,000, situated about 20 miles north of Indianapolis. In an exceedingly interesting article describing the methods and results employed in delivering the library to the farmer's door, Miss Lula M. Miesse, Noblesville's librarian, says:

"We tried both adult and juvenile stations in schoolhouses and homes and found the adult section was not well patronized. The country schools are open only five days a week and only six months a year. So the house to house plan of service was determined upon. We visited some other cities, where library autos were in use, and after looking over various chassis and trucks, we decided upon a Dodge Brothers Business Car. In the first place it did not need a great deal of remodeling for our purpose. It was strongly built and highly recommended by people who were using it for durability under hard service, which we knew our car must receive.

"The seats were already comfortable. We had the wire screens and the entire back removed. The steel sides were bent over seven inches and used for shelves in front of the book cases. Inside the car we built our book cases of oak with glass doors opening outward on both sides of the truck, so that it advertises its own work as it travels over the country. The shelves slant slightly back to hold the books away from the glass."

EMOTION AND LOVE

Motion blinds us. To discover that, one does not have to read a learned book.

Emotion blinds women in love more frequently than men, and more completely. If the extracts from two letters prove anything at all.

"I am desperately in love and have been engaged a year.

"Three months ago the young man went to a nearby city to work. He has seldom written to me. He has been to see me but twice in six weeks. When he came he acted like a mere acquaintance. He never speaks of marriage any more.

"I am afraid to stop writing to him for fear he will surely think I am giving him up for another man!"

This girl's love is a fog through which she cannot see the truth.

She is afraid he will think she loves another—if she ceases to write! He has stopped writing—and she can't guess that it is because another woman is taking up his time!

Take a hundred cases of disillusioned love, and in ninety-nine of them the girl will assume that she is somehow to blame.

The capacity of the female heart for banking on to a romance after the man has forgotten it is only more illustrated:

"Two years ago I promised to marry the only man I ever loved. He was divorced and he had a little daughter who was with her mother.

A year ago, while I was finishing preparations for my wedding, he made a trip of 1000 miles to see his child and to make a settlement to provide for her education.

"He never came back to me. He wrote to me for a month, but never since. Now word comes that he is going to remarry his wife.

"I love him devotedly. I cannot give him up. I am on the point of going to the town where he is."

More fog, more blindness produced by emotion! If she could think clearly, the girl probably could not be induced to follow a man who was about to marry the mother of his child.

The girl is not to be blamed for her feelings. Emotions are tyrannical and few persons can dominate their particular assortment.

But they can determine whether they will not succumb to them, and be ruled by them.

"Strong feeling is the instrument and element of strong self-control; but it requires to be cultivated in that direction."

A sane girl would step aside from the path of a speeding auto. It is the same way, if her peace of mind is valuable to her, and her self-respect, she will get away from the menace of unreasonable love.

College Reunions On November 22nd

Valley City, N. D., Nov. 14.—Tuesday evening, November 22, from 5:30 to 8:30 has been set aside in the program of the twenty-fourth annual North Dakota State Teachers Association for the various college reunions and dinners that are an integral part of each year's session. These hours follow the business meeting of the Association and precede the concert by Lambert Murphy. Some of the links of the state already have completed their plans for a reunion and are sending in their plans, the announcement of the place in Fargo the annual dinner will be held.

$35,000,000 ON METHODIST CENTENARY

Amount Paid Shows Increase
Of 360% In Giving Of
M. E. Church

Over thirty-five million dollars has been paid on the Methodist centenary, which is the great world mission movement of this church since June 1, 1918, an increase of over 360 percent in giving of the Methodist Episcopal church. This is the most remarkable example of increased benevolent giving in the history of the church. Every Christian man and woman should thank God for this significant achievement.

Rev. Morris W. Kinney, D. D., Chicago, Ill., treasurer of the committee on conservation and advance.

This statement was issued from the local Methodist headquarters of the Helena Area which includes the Northwestern states today by the Rev. Geo. Mecklenburg, area secretary.

If this movement had resulted only in the giving of money it would have been a thousand times worth while, however, the fact remains that this giving represents a great spiritual enterprise which means the bettering of the world," Dr. Elin said.

Methodist colleges in the United States have been soundly improved and conditions improved in large cities through the establishment of strong missions among needy peoples. Churches in the home field have been stimulated to create giving so that gifts by the Board of Home Missions of two million dollars to assist various church enterprises resulted in the giving of ten million dollars in addition by local congregations.

Stimulated Churches.

In the foreign field, schools and colleges have been greatly improved, churches have been erected, two hundred and sixty-seven new missionaries sent out in one year, a host of native workers added and marvelous results achieved in strategic centers throughout the world.

Moreover, the Centenary has stimulated the churches' evangelization. During the last ten years the average annual net increase in membership has been 90,000, but last year the increase was 150,000, and this year's reports of evangelism will far exceed those of last year. In other words, wherever there has been a generous centenary giving, there has also been a rising tide of evangelism. Investigation in several areas shows that where there has been the most generous giving, evangelism has produced the greatest results.

Rev. Mecklenburg rates the world as in need of missionary work everywhere. The world was never in such a condition.

In addition to the needs of our cities there is a need to heal the wounds that have been caused by racial strife. As ten percent of our population is negro and these people are becoming more widely distributed throughout the nation because of the northward migration during the last four or five years, the need for patience and Christian justice becomes more evident because of incidents like Washington, Chicago, and Tulsa during the last few years. There is a problem in Christian brotherhood that must be solved and the Methodist church with its large following of Negro Christians must strengthen its work speedily if it is to help in mitigating racial strife.

Advance Remarkable.

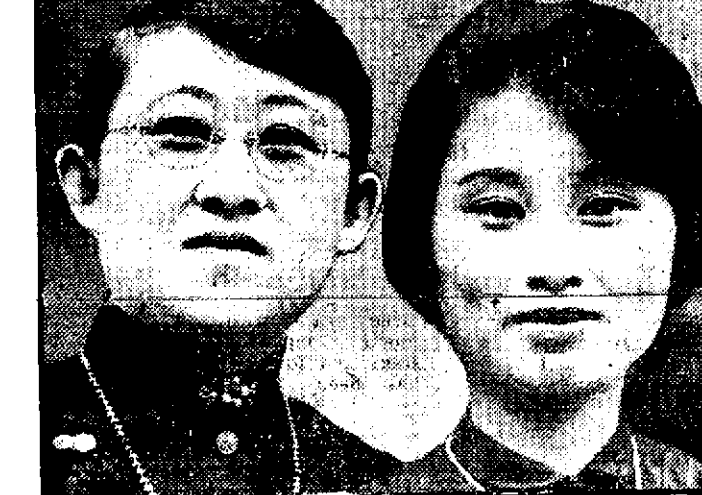

"While our advance has been remarkable in non-Christian lands, yet we must consider some of the work that is undone. China has a population of four hundred millions. Eighty millions should be in the public schools. Few more than three millions are in the public schools. If the far east is to be saved from becoming the world battleground, the Chinese must be educated. Alone, they are unable to provide money and trained leadership. The Methodist church must continue to make its contribution to its Christian schools and colleges in China. The need is imperative. We must go forward."

South and Central America with their twenty republics are our southern neighbors. Among those republics there is an illiteracy of from 25 to 85 percent. In the hinterland these republics have almost unlimited resources. Migration in the future will largely be attracted there because the countries are all sparsely populated. The question arises: What shall be the future civilization of these republics? Shall we let them alone or shall we help them to prepare trained Christian leadership? A similar situation confronts us in Mexico. Everywhere the world is beckoning us for help. Shall we be true to the spirit of Jesus, or shall we let the world alone? This is no time for pessimism. This is the strategic hour. The world is in turmoil. There is no positive leadership. This is the opportunity for Christian statesmanship, backed by the benevolent Christian spirit. Today is the accepted hour."

LOVE ON TRIAL

(By Winona Wilcox)

The sophistication of girl students of university, college and normal schools is beyond anything dreamed of in the philosophy of their elders. It has nothing to do with bobbed hair nor the art of holding a cigarette gracefully. It is half a world away from movie smartness about marriage and vaudeville humor about the wife.

The sophistication of many girls who have acquired a higher education amounts to this: They believe that romantic love is not always the durable emotion which tradition and convention and inclination paint it. They hold that while ideal love may be the most splendid fabric from which to create human happiness, it is often as intangible as light and as transient as lightning.

The topic was suggested by the following from a young man:

"I've been turned down by the finest girl who ever lived. We have been chums all summer, and have given and taken all sorts of confidences like pals.

"She isn't the prettiest girl I know, but she's the best, a girl with sympathy and a tender heart.

"I've knocked around a good deal and I covet a woman's tenderness. She knows it and yet she will not consider me as her future husband.

"When I spoke about marriage to her, she frankly stated that it was impossible. I am not on her moral plane. Put so, I admitted the truth, but protested that my love, my need of her ought to be enough.

"We had a strange talk. She loves me desperately, I am devoted to her, she can't see why she should have lived by the strict code of morals only

TAKES CARE OF 5 CHILDREN

Mrs. Taylor's Sickness Ended
by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Roxbury, Mass.—"I suffered continually with backache and was often despondent, had dizzy spells and at my monthly periods it was almost impossible to keep around at my work. Since my last baby came two years ago my back has been worse and no position I could get in would relieve it, and doctor's medicine did not help me. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have found great relief since using it. My back is much better and I can sleep well. I keep house and have the care of five children so my work is very trying and I am very thankful I have found the Compound such a help. I recommend it to my friends and if you wish to use this letter I am very glad to help any woman suffering as I was until I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MAUDE E. TAYLOR, 5 St. James Place, Roxbury, Mass.

Backache is one of the most common symptoms of a displacement or derangement of the female system. No woman should make the mistake of trying to overcome it by heroic endurance, but profit by Mrs. Taylor's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"It was a knockout blow for me, at I guess it's according to the rules for matrimony which a lot of girls follow today.

"The girls have been talking this stuff for a long time. They ought to be shown the other side.

"Isn't it plain that if the girls of the highest culture take this attitude, never marry, never become mothers, the racial stock will not be as fine as it ought to be?"

There's a science called eugenics which answers "yes" to this man's question. And also it endorses the girl's attitude!

Eugenics is a big subject, but not too big to be discussed by any pair of lovers.

Mr. Murphy has for years been a member of the quartette singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and he appears annually in the big music festival at Cincinnati of which Ysaye is the head and in the North Shore Music Festival held in the gymnasium of Northwestern University. His associates in an appearance there last June were Marie Sundeles, soprano, Merle Alcock, contralto and Arthur Middleton, bass. Supported by a chorus of one thousand picked singers from Evanston and Chicago, these singers presented an oratorio dealing with the crucifixion of Christ that occupied an afternoon and evening. Mr. Murphy's voice is a lyric tenor, ranging downward to notes that might be envied by a baritone.

CLEAR UP THE MUDDY SKIN

BY MME. MOREAU.
Paris Nov. 14.—Complexion muddy. Lots of little spots and you don't quite know what to do about them. Mustn't take it so seriously! Really you can do just what you wish. Really little things that'll clear it all up nicely.

For instance there's a rather gentle treatment, a mixture that you can put together yourself and apply every night for a while until your skin looks better. It requires 3 ounces of powdered sulphur, one quart of distilled water, one dram of spirits of camphor. Mix the camphor and sulphur to a paste, then add the water. Let it stand 24 hours and then strain. Apply the mixture which results to your skin every night after cleansing.

There's another mixture you can fix at home. Quite as helpful and quite as easy to make.

The requirements are four grams of tincture of benzoin, six grains of borax, 10 grams of spirits of camphor, 100 grams of orange flower water.

This, too, should be put on the face after the nightly cleansing.

DRESSES AT 43 CENTS EACH

MISS RUBY MABRY IN A 43 CENT DRESS

BY NEA SERVICE
Muskegon, Mich. Nov. 14. Dresses for 43 cents apiece. Yes, really. Buy at our quantities on hand. A 43 cent cloth sack. Save the 11¢ when you get four of them. Make a dress. The suggestion comes from Miss Ruby Mabry of the exterior of the Okla. at A. J. M. Co.

Miss Mabry made one and wears it—proof of her discovery.

A sack is used for the front and one for the back at the blouse which is cut long so that a two-piece skirt made of two more sacks can be attached.

A conventional design embroidered in colored macramized thread is a decorative touch.

It can be taken out of such sacks by sewing them in water mixed with cold oil and they bring them in soap sud.

PRETTY HANDS FOR THE HOME WORKER

BY MME. MOREAU.
Paris Nov. 14.—Housework ruining your hands.

But it needn't really! Even though you do your own washings.

If you're going to have your hands in water a great deal, before putting them in rub them well with olive oil. Rub the oil in so the skin will absorb it—every bit. Then wipe off the surplus—don't rub too hard!—and set about the washing.

Following this treatment you'll find your skin won't wrinkle in the way which makes what is called "washer woman's hands." It won't get sore and it will remain quite supple.

Ordinarily a family washing would rob the skin of all its natural oil but the olive oil adjusts matters.

When the washing is all finished, oil your hands again and then wash them well in warm salt water. If salt water isn't obtainable put a little corn meal in the basin.

Don't fail if you're attending to your own household duties, to cream your hands well at night and put on the pair of old gloves. It's a good idea when fixing gloves for night wear to puncture the palms that is make little holes which the air can seep in through. That helps to whiten along with the cream.

Thanksgiving As One Family Spends It

It's a big family and they're scattered to the four winds but every Thanksgiving they gather and have the most wonderful hour together.

At the home of one whom they call "great aunt" a log fire is lighted in the great old-fashioned fireplace. Candles in old-fashioned holders furnish the only light beyond that of the flickering flames.

All of the relatives gather in a circle around the fire and then each in his turn tells of the mercies of that year the greatest blessings.

They're a family of folk who live exceedingly close—they are exceedingly fond of each other—else such a ceremony would be dull.

After the hour of telling blessings, apples, nuts and popcorn are brought and they chatter informally until about eight o'clock when a sumptuous dinner is served.

At the conclusion of the dinner some one of the younger children is

PRESIDENT LEE MAKES PUBLIC STRIKE LETTER

Shows He Was Not In Favor Of R. R. Strike—Chairmen Fed "Raw Meat"

CURSED BY OWN MEMBERS

By Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 14.—W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has authorized the publication of a letter written by him to the general chairman of the Railroad Trainmen on one of the leading western railroads indicating his position on the railroad strike recently averted.

The letter was written on October 21 six days before the strike was declared off. It read as follows:

"Dear Sir and Brother:

Those who were in attendance at the Chicago meeting last July if honest enough to tell the truth will remember my pleading with them not to take a strike vote on the question of the 12 per cent reduction of July 1 but instead to pass the strongest possible resolution against such reduction and make it clear in such resolution that any further invasion upon our rates or working conditions would mean a strike. None of the organizers, executives, however would accept that position and our own general chairman had been fed on 'raw meat' apparently to such an extent that nothing but the restoration of that 12 per cent reduction would satisfy them.

Question of Reduction.

I could not make myself believe then and surely not at this time that railroad men could take the position that they would not accept any reduction whatever although all other classes of labor were being required to accept one or more reductions fully equal to the 12 per cent designated in the board's decision No. 147.

"You know I have been cursed by members of the Brotherhood in the past because I would not join with the radicals and eat 'em alive' but instead tried to follow a conservative course. Because of such unjust treatment by those I was attempting to help or rather save I concluded last July (when I failed to get any conservative help from those at the Chicago meeting of the five organizations) to change my policy and pass the responsibility heretofore used in connection with proposed strikes to our general committeemen—to do whatever such committeemen desired not in violation of our Brotherhood's laws. Therefore the general chairman in my opinion is entirely responsible for whatever result follows this proposed strike. If we as an organization win and make the U. S. Railroad Labor Board restore the 12 per cent reduction defined in Decision

Welcomes a Fight.

I know this letter will not appeal to you but I must get this out of my system and I know of no other officer or member of the Brotherhood to whom I feel more justified in unloading my honest belief than you. Some day this statement may prove interesting and you may be asked regarding my position and my honest belief as indicated before the battle commenced. Hence this advance statement. Ordinarily I welcome a fight with a railroad or with an individual but I do not relish letting the other fellow pick the time and place, to say nothing of the arms that are to be used and I have never in the past walked blindly into a trap such as now set for all railroad labor organizations which according to present indications, only the transportation brotherhoods will be foolish enough to stumble into.

My best information gained at Chicago yesterday was that the other railroad labor organizations would probably not join the transportation brotherhood in the controversy and while I have not always approved of the action taken by Jen Jewell and his bunch I will certainly take my hat off to them if at a time like this they show sufficient intelligence to keep out of a controversy desired by the railroads and encouraged and financed by the manufacturers' associations of this country.

Now that I have gotten this out of my system I am fraternally yours

No 147 the credit is all theirs. If we lose I know in advance they will say the fault is Bill Lee's.

Public Opinion Not Favorable.

I have no hesitation in saying that in my entire life time I have never known of a more unanimous feeling against us by the business and labor world than now exists. And to me it is the greatest sin ever committed by their membership committing suicide as I believe is found to occur in the strike goes on a scheduled. Although to all approve it in the face of the action taken by our membership and committees would mean annihilation of the leader in so far as his future with his organization was concerned.

I had hoped that after 21 years membership in the Brotherhood I should never live to see the day that the membership I represented would become so insane as to demand the right to commit suicide at a time when my men are out of employment and more men on short time in this country than ever before known. The railroad companies most certainly want the strike to go on because they know it will likely mean the end of our organization. They fully realize there are at least two if not three men for every job that will be made vacant by the strike and while I am sure you know that physically and financially I can afford to have the knowledge that if some miracle is not performed to stop the strike go on as well as or better perhaps than any member employed on the railroads it is most depressing to me to proceed as we are with the strike. We can expect a large percentage of our membership to become scabs and the remainder who participate in the strike to become tramps.

Welcomes a Fight.

A COMMUNITY CHORUS
Bismarck should support loyally the efforts of the Business and Professional Women's club to build up a strong community chorus. The Bismarck community chorus will give its premier concert this week and a crowded house should greet the chorus. Upon several occasions the members have given freely of their services to assist community efforts. It is not a money making venture, but there is some slight expense to an organization of this kind.
Get behind the choral society and show by your presence that their efforts to promote a community spirit are appreciated.

JEALOUSY
A man, accused of bigamy, strolls into the prosecutor's office in Kansas City, a wife on each arm. Contrary to the age-old rule, there was no antagonism between the wives. They were amiable, discussing terms of settlement.
How many American wives could act like that, in company with "the other woman"?

Students of the psychology of jealousy will see in this case a throw-back to the days when a man had as many wives as he could support. Women stood for it. They had to, because it was part of the game to keep a woman submissive by keeping her dependent—and the game's still played that way.

CHAPLIN
Charley Chaplin, back from Europe, says: "The foreign pictures are wonderful in many ways. There is a vast difference between them and the American pictures, but that is due to the difference in standards. While they lack the technique we have here, they have much better stories. They go in for greater frankness and are more interested in every-day occurrences."
The way to end war is to make the people of various nations realize that they all are much the same, with common problems. Moving picture film is the greatest educational implement for that. Movies should be true to life. And no tariff should be considered, to check the spread of knowledge by movies.

FAT
A squad of fat women trains in New York to reduce weight. Dieting makes two of them fatter. No wonder! The "diet" includes, for dinner: Chicken broth, baked chicken, stewed tomatoes, two rusks, two slices bread, dish of fruit, half an orange, half an apple, dozen grapes, cup of tea or coffee.
If that is "diet," they must learn to box cars for dinner pails when they have regular meals.

What fat women really need, to get thin, is something to make them worry. Chicago had a similar contest several years ago. Judges summed up results by saying that contestants were taller standing up than sitting down, and that the only one that got thin was the cook.

BEER ON PRESCRIPTION IN ONLY NINE STATES

Two quarts of wine and 10 courts of real beer with a kick in it. That's what the new ruling in Washington permits a doctor to prescribe, at any one time and as frequently as necessary, for patients who need "medicine" in large quantities.
Thirsty ones! Before you rejoice, hark to Wayne B. Wheeler, head lawyer for the dregs. He says the ruling really applies only in California, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Rhode Island and Maryland.
Everywhere else, state laws prohibit the use of medical beer, or hold it down to small quantities. The wets have not won an important battle. Liquor is not coming back, legally. Even if national prohibition were knocked out, state laws would keep most of the country a desert. Don't forget that, as far back as early 1917, of the 2543 counties in the United States, 2330 were on the dry list, only 213 legally wet.

JOHN BOYD DUNLOP
Dublin cables the death of John Boyd Dunlop, 81 years old. His name is not familiar. But you would get a lot of bumps in life, had it not been for Dunlop.
He popularized bicycling, and was the father of comfortable auto riding, by being first to apply the pneumatic rubber tire to bicycles, in 1888. The air-inflated tire had been patented in England in 1843, but 45 years went by before Dunlop was the first man to apply the device to bicycles, and makers copied the idea.

Dunlop did the world a great service. Yet he died almost unknown. Fame is reserved for movie stars, artists, arch-criminals and military destroyers.
Who invented the button? The safety-pin? The knife and fork? The door lock? The pencil? The shoe lace? All these, you use daily, with much comfort. Like Dunlop, little attention is paid to the creators of useful, every-day devices. Future generations, more sensible, will correct the error, and honor the truly great—the useful.

PENALTY
Many envied Ponzi, admired his cunning. Now Ponzi's in jail. His wife is broke and says she will become a private secretary. Ponzi's palace-home and all its costly furnishings go under the auctioneer's hammer.
Hell is not as pleasant as the road to it.

BETTING
Lloyd's, insurance company of London, offers 19 to 1 against war between Japan and the United States on or before Dec. 31, 1922.
That tells you more truth about our relations with Japan than you will find in 100,000 diplomatic notes or speeches by international politicians.

SMOKE
Business is better says the H. C. Frick Coal Co., branch of the U. S. Steel Corporation. It starts up 1250 coke ovens, knowing that it soon will have market for lots of fuel.
When steel industry begins to prick up its ears, general business is ready to climb out of bed.

Farmers often pray for rain. City people should pray for smoke—the sure and only sign of industrial prosperity.

PIES
Twenty-seven pies served on Thanksgiving, all baked from one squash grown by Serope Beldoin of Roxbury, Mass. Note that this squash, 27 inches long, was grown in a city man's backyard garden. Not bad, for an amateur.
Squashes of this size will be the rule, not the exception, a few generations hence when congestion compels production of larger food units. Your descendants will eat potatoes as big as watermelons, other foods of corresponding big size. Future Luther Burbanks will find the way.

SYMBOL
Road makers in West Africa dig up the famous golden stool of Ashanti. Native chieftains used it as a throne until the white man chased them with his repeating rifles.
Workers who dug up the golden stool stripped it of its gold. That started a young rebellion. White military authorities had a hard time spiriting the culprits away.
Foolish, you say? Primitive superstition? Yet there would be similar trouble if invaders stole our Declaration of Independence. All races, civilized or barbarous, have sacred symbols.

EDITORIAL REVIEW
Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may have both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.

MISUNDERSTANDING
Who is filling the air with vague hints of war? Conditional insinuations and answerless questions always have been the favorite instruments of the military propagandists.

Ever since the armistice the nerves of the people of Japan and the United States have been kept on edge by subtle rumors of indefinite source. The sole purpose of such a propaganda is to arouse fear, with the ultimate end of inciting to war. Nobody for a moment believes that the American people have any desire or purpose to make war upon Japan. There is every evidence that among the great body of the people of Japan no sentiment of aggression against any of the property or rights of the American people exists.

The best explanation of what is going on was given lately by a member of the Japanese house of representatives, Kotaro Mochizuki. "In consequence of the lack of thorough understanding between the two countries on the question of Korea, Manchuria and Mongolia, China, Siberia, California, Mexico and Yap," said he, "the naval rivalry of the two countries has remarkably intensified of late the mutual distrust of Japanese and Americans, and military men dreaming of brilliant exploits politicians athirst for fame, scholars given to thoughtless windy rhetoric, and shipbuilders and other capitalists having vast interests in industrial enterprises, have taken advantage of this deplorable situation. All these directly or indirectly exert themselves to increase the international strain with no other ulterior object but that of bringing about war between the two countries. Thus it can be asserted beyond contradiction that, instead of the traditional relationship of amity and friendliness, suspicion and enmity are being fomented in the minds of the two peoples in general."

The Japanese statesman has hit upon the explanation of what is in progress. It is sincerely to be hoped that the coming conference may help to clear up the misunderstanding and make this sinister propaganda powerless for evil.—Detroit News.

WHAT THAT RED CROSS DOLLAR CAN DO TO HELP THE NEEDY

A dollar rolled into the office recently, sat down on the edge of the desk and rubbed his silver face.
"Well," he said wearily, "I've had a busy year. Gosh, but I'm glad you didn't put me in the bank or pay me out on your car."
"You'd better be glad you didn't go to pay the income tax," I responded coldly. "Where have you been all this time? Sit down and give an account of yourself."
"I've been spending most of my time among the ex-service men," he admitted. "Do you know that in this country there are at present 26,000 ex-service men in the 66 U. S. P. H. S. hospitals served by the Red Cross? I have been visiting these institutions where there are hundreds of men dying of tuberculosis contracted through the war, and where other men lie year after year in plaster casts because of a bit of shrapnel in their spines as well as the Psychiatric hospitals where the boys we sent away in 1917 scream and rave and have to be behind bars till they die. Ten million of my dollar friends need to help the ex-service man last year and through the Federal Board of Vocational training we have helped 80,000 ex-soldiers thrown out of work because of disability back into normal life. And these 80,000 men represent at least 250,000 women and children dependent on them. Ah, no, the war isn't over by any means. In the hospitals and sanatoriums it is still being fought."

He paused a moment and stroked the E Pluribus Unum on his brow, then continued pensively, "Ah, yes. I've seen some strange things since you sent me away last year. I've been in seventy disasters in the United States alone—calamities like the San Antonio and the Pueblo floods. I have stood with the doctor and the Red Cross nurse alone in cities laid waste by wind or earthquake and have heard the cries of the dying mingle with those of the living for the dead. I have been with the public health nurse in little mountain towns and in far remote places where she did everything from bathing the new-born baby to burying the dead. And I've been in Europe, too, among Mr. Hoover's babies—and seen 3,500,000 little children saved to civilization through the European Relief Council."
"You have certainly earned a vacation," I assured him. "Do you want to spend a quiet life time in the Safe Deposit Vault or how about a few months in the baby's bank? Either one is guaranteed to be restful."
The Dollar hesitated so long that I could see the eagle's feathers quiver. "If it's all the same to you I would rather keep on working," he explained thoughtfully. "I can't do a whole lot of good as a gentleman of leisure. Helping soldiers and feeding dying babies is much more in my line."
"I wish they all felt the same way about it," I said as I put him back on the Red Cross Roll Call.

POETS' CORNER

THE TRUANT
Through the meadow lane he goes,
With his rod and can of bait,
Trudging to the river's side,
Where he knows the fishes wait.
Asking why he's not in school,
He replies: "It ain't no fun.
Settin' stud'ny 'em books.
When th' fishin' time has come."
Bronzed and tanned his little face,
With its blue eyes all aglow,
As he says in pleading voice:
"You won't tell on me, I know."
Half a question, half demand,
As his saucy eyes grow dim;
Does he know I lost a lad,
Just about the size of him.

The picture is called a "Drama of Today," and involves the question of capital punishment. The whole gamut of human emotions is run in the production. In many cities "Mother O'

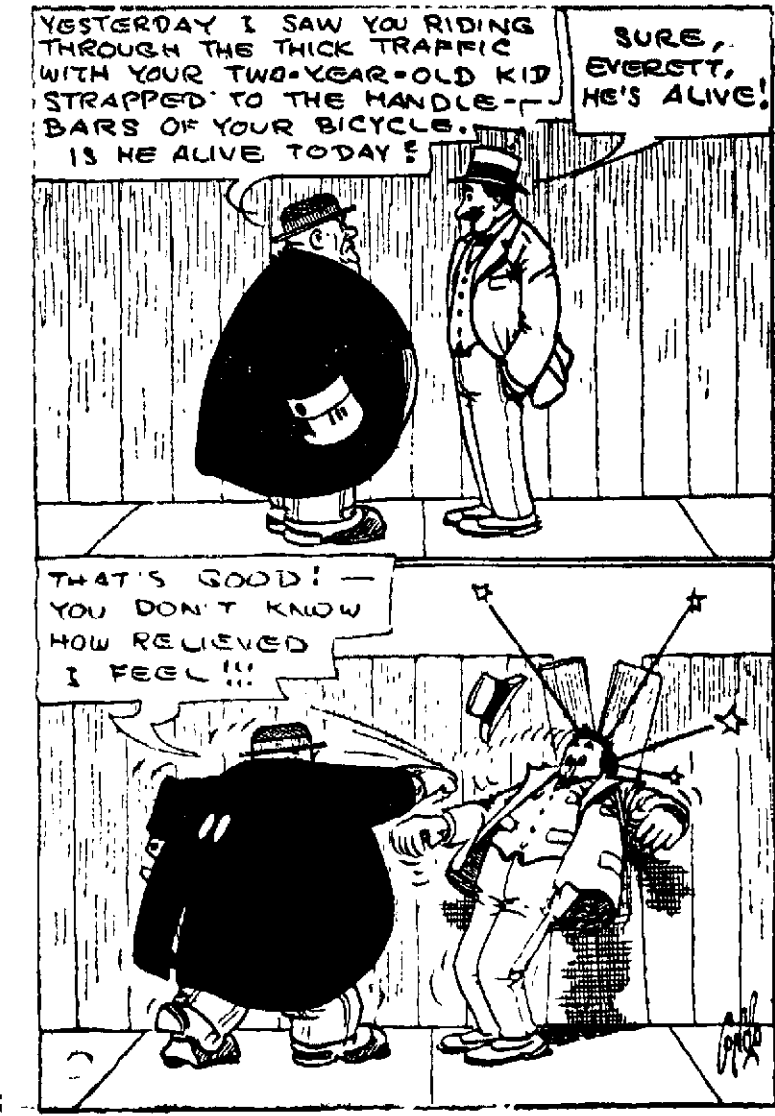

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS
By Olive Burton Roberts

One day Nancy and Nick went out to hunt Mr. Hermit Crab for Cap'n Pennywinkle. Not that the fairy policeman cared where Mr. Hermit Crab was, but that he did care where Mr. Whelk and Mrs. Whelk and all the little Whelks weren't. For all the said to tell you, but true, my dears, that Mr. H. Crab loves to eat whelks. He really and truly eats them out of house and home, and when he has filled up his greedy tummy, he moves right into the shell his victims have just vacated. He selects the nicest, biggest, most comely whelk-shell he can find and crawls in and goes to sleep until his dinner is digested. At supper time he wakes up, sneaks out, finds another whelk family, and repeats the performance. Really, there was danger of the whelks being exterminated. And that is what worried Cap'n Pennywinkle.
"You'll have to find Mr. Crab and bring him to me," he said to the Twins. "If he didn't hide so well, I could send Cutty Cuttlefish after him, for Cutty likes crabs just as crabs like whelks, but he can't find him. You can ask your Green Shoes to take you 'round to all the big shells, and you can peep inside if necessary go inside, as you can become as little as you like. Then when you discover Mr. Hermit, show him your badge and tell him to follow you. He'll come meekly enough, for he knows he must do as I say. Then when I see him I've got a better way mile long to read to him about the error of his ways. I'm going to keep law and order in Wigglesin Land or I'm a Dutchman. There, now, run along, Kiddies. Do your best!"

Off started the Twins on another errand.

MRS. KILBOURN GOES OUT FIRST TIME IN MONTHS

Minneapolis Woman Gains Nine-teen Pounds In Five Weeks Time By Taking Tanlac
"When I began taking Tanlac I was so weak I could hardly walk across the room; but after finishing my first bottle I walked down town and got me another. The first time I had been out of the house in three months," said Mrs. Ed. Kilbourn, 1610 Clinton Ave., Minneapolis Minn.
"For three years I could hardly eat or sleep, and felt so run down all the time I seemed hardly worth living. Everything I ate made me sick and seemed to form a lump right in the pit of my stomach, and kept me in awful pain for hours and I never could get a good night's sleep on account of nervousness."
"But in five weeks after I started taking Tanlac I had gained 19 pounds in weight, was doing all my housework and could get about like I could when a girl. My appetite is simply fine now, and I feel well and strong in every way. The way Tanlac has restored my health and built me up is the talk of our neighborhood."

70 POUNDS OF BEEF PER ACRE IS RECORD OF PLAINS STATION

As high as 70 pounds of beef per acre can be produced in one season on native prairie pastures of the semi-arid district of western North Dakota. This fact, demonstrated in the six-year pasture experiments at the Northern Great Plains Field Station, Mandan, is one of the facts about North Dakota resources which will be illustrated by the educational exhibit being prepared by the State Agricultural Experiment Station, Fargo, for the Grain and Hay Show to be held in connection with the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago Nov. 26 to Dec. 3. Actual strips of sod from the land in which these gains were made will be sent to Chicago as part of the exhibit.

The field which made this beef production record is the 30-acre pasture at the Mandan station. Ten head of cattle are pastured in it annually. As this is one steer to three acres, the field does not produce enough grass to carry the steers thru the latter part of the season.

The largest pastures at the station, carrying the same number of steers, do not produce as much beef per acre per season, the experiment record show. The 50-acre pasture has produced, as a six-year average, 556 pounds. The 70-acre pasture has produced 469 pounds, while the 100-acre pasture has produced 323. The 70-acre pasture produced enough grass to carry the steers thru the entire season in good shape. The 100-acre pasture provides more vegetation than the cattle will eat, but the steers exercise so much in grazing this field that it is less satisfactory as a beef producer than the 70-acre pasture.

A chart showing the distance a steer will travel in a day's grazing in the different sized pastures also will be shown at the Chicago exhibit. In the 30-acre pasture, with fair grazing, a steer will travel one and five eighth miles in a day. In the 100-acre field, with good grazing, a

GLOBE TROTTER.

Penn State played its first intercollegiate football game in 1887, just 34 years ago, when an elaborate schedule of two games was run through successfully. Both games were with Bucknell, about fifty miles away. That was a long trip in those days. Just harken to the schedule of this same Penn State team now:

1. to Beale and his huskies will travel approximately 5,500 miles this fall. The most lengthy trip takes them to Seattle to play the University of Washington. On this trip they will travel just about 6,000 miles. Their Harvard trip was about 1,200 miles and the jaunt to New York for the Georgia Tech game another 600 miles. The Navy game at Philadelphia necessitates traveling 425 miles and the Pitt game, the shortest trip of the season, 350 miles.

Went's long before grid squads will be traveling around the world to meet opponents.

The boxing game is getting to be as much of a woman's sport as it is a man's. A woman's ring, very few, the lady who sat at the ringside was the "par bon comrade" among the sippers. But today - well, the pine boards look like a well-fed bridge party. At the featherweight championship match between Kibane and Frush, a third of the audience was made up of women.

A man named Kingston has offered Pres. Baker of the Phillies, $500,000 for his baseball club. That goes too far with kiddin'. Doncha think?

They looked like an old feather bed. It took Jess Guilford, the new amateur golf champion, 16 years to come to his own and win the title. Of all sports there is no other game where a fellow has to work so long and hard for his reward, and work harder after he gets to the top. "Long" Jim Barnes can sympathize with Guilford for he had the same long road to travel before he won the national open championship last spring. They both went through a long, monotonous grind getting into every match possible for the sake of competition and improvement. Golf is the most uncertain of all games for the very next day after a fellow has won the championship he may be defeated by some club with a link full of luck.

A mighty cheer rose from the stands as the substitute, with outstretched hands, Received the ball and took it on a play. For the coach had told and retold it. When you mitt on a football, Hold He did. He's got it to this very very day.

There is such a thing as doing your work too well. Take the case of the heavyweight champion, Jack Dempsey. He has fought everybody there is to fight and strung them up like so much carbo. Now he has to start all over again. Willard up!

TRIDUNE WANTS - FOR RESULTS

Paper Battle To Prove Best Teams in Big Ten Is Going Merrily On

A LOT OF "MIGHTBES"

Football critics living outside of Big Ten territory are going to have a hard time proving a football team outside that territory is the best team in the country this year, unless it happens to be a critic living further west. Farther West must always be added after the results of the Ohio State-California football game of last New Year's day. The paper battle royal to prove the best team in the Big Ten is going merrily on. The best team might be Ohio State university, but then Oberlin, who defeated the Buckeyes in the opening game of the season, must be considered. It might be Wisconsin if the latter team passes the barrier of Michigan and Chicago. It might be Iowa, but, with the exception of Notre Dame, the teams Iowa has defeated have not shown strength.

Starting toward the coast, it might be Nebraska, but that team failed to defeat Notre Dame, and lost a single touchdown battle to West of Nebraska. There are some great teams, but Colorado is the only one the middle west has seen, and it did not look impressive. On the far coast, the teams are having a merry little race with California showing the most class to date. Other teams must still be considered, however.

Removing all possibilities of figuring a title for the east is comparatively simple. The process brings the title somewhere to Big Ten territory. Chicago defeated Princeton and the Tigers defeated Harvard. Notre Dame defeated the Army and Nebraska defeated Pittsburgh. Taking it for granted that comparative scores are worthless but that football fanatics will wrestle with them, the following series of games are of interest to the middle west.

Iowa defeated Notre Dame. Notre Dame defeated the Army 28 to 0. The Army defeated Middlebury 19 to 0. Middlebury defeated Williams 7 to 3. Williams defeated Columbia university 20 to 0. Columbia defeated New York university 19 to 0. New York university defeated Wesleyan university 7 to 0, and tied Colgate university.

Another little journey into comparative scores starts with Oberlin. Oberlin defeated Ohio State 7 to 0. Ohio defeated Chicago 7 to 0. Chicago defeated Princeton 9 to 0. Princeton defeated Harvard 10 to 3. Harvard defeated Georgia 10-7. Georgia defeated Virginia 21 to 0, and Auburn 7 to 0.

Or take Detroit university, which is in Big Ten territory, but which has played few of the teams in the territory. Detroit university defeated Boston College 28 to 0. Boston tracked way down into Texas and defeated Baylor 23 to 0. Then Boston took on about all of the teams it could find in the east and except for a tie with "fighting Fordham," it won all its games. Detroit also took in some other Southern territory when it defeated Tulane and Tulane had to its credit a victory over Rice Institute.

Taking up the Iowa-Notre Dame-Nebraska angle again, Nebraska after traveling two thousand miles and playing on a strange field 10 to 0, Pittsburgh is known in the east as Glen Warner's team. Pittsburgh defeated West Virginia 21 to 13; Syracuse university 36 to 0, and the University of Pennsylvania 28 to 0. Syracuse defeated Brown university 28 to 0, and Maryland 12 to 0.

Thus the tentacles of comparative score victories reach out to the east, the South Atlantic seaboard, the south and the far south, west in a rather commanding way. Cornell university in the east, now coached by Gilmour Doble, who started his coaching career with the North Dakota Aggies, and Lafayette, a little college at Easton, Pa., and Vanderbilt in the south are the teams in the sections that present the middle west cannot claim supremacy over. The war is on for that leadership of the middle west which the comparative scores indicate. Westward except for the memory of the 1st New Year's day, the strength of the teams is an unknown quantity.

FARGO-GRAFTON TEAMS IN A TIE

The two teams, Fargo and Grafton, are tied in the championship of the state high schools, played at the state high school stadium, the game being played with temperate below freezing and an ice skating swirling. Lines of snow down upon the warriors.

A winner will meet whoever team is selected as the champion of the eastern section. Mandan high school, which refused to back the schedule planned by the state board, will play Williston on Thanksgiving day in Mandan, according to present plans.

JIM WAINWRIGHT'S KID

BY JOHN A. HILL

Copyright, 1921, By Literary Digest Syndicate.

As I put down my name and the number of the crack engine of America—as well as the imprint of a greasy thumb—on the register of our roundhouse last Saturday night, the foreman borrowed a crow of my fireman's blue-out, and said to me:

"John, that old fellow that's putting on the new injectors wants to see you."

"What does he want, Jack?" said I. "I don't remember to have seen him, and I'll tell you right now that the old squirts in the 411 are good enough for me—I ain't got time to monkey with new fangled injectors on that run."

"Why, he says he knew you out West 15 years ago."

"Sure. What kind of looking chap is he?"

"Youngish face, John; but hair and whiskers as white as snow. Sorry-looking rooster—seems like he's lost all his friends on earth, and won't jest sure where to find 'em in the next world."

"I can't imagine who it would be. Let's see—like Clark, he's dead; Dick Bellinger, from Delwin, Jim Kurr, Dave Keller, Bill Carr—can't be none of them. What's his name?"

"Whitcomb—no, Wetherston—no, because why, no—no, Wainwright, that's it. Wainwright, J. E. Wainwright."

"Jim Wainwright?" says I. "Jim Wainwright? I haven't heard a word of him for years—thought he was dead; but he's a young fellow come back to me."

"Well, he don't look it," said Jack. After supper I went up to the hotel and asked for J. E. Wainwright.

Maybe you think Jim and I didn't go over the history of the "front." "Out at the front" is the pioneer's ideal of railroad life. To a man who has put in a few years there the memory of it is like the memory of marches, skirmishes and battles in the mind of the veteran soldier. I guess we started at the lowest number engine on the road—I guessed about each and every one. We had finished the list of engineers and had fairly started on the firemen when a thought struck me, and I said:

"Oh, I forgot him, Jim—the 'Kid,' your cheery little cricketer of a fireman, who thought Jim Wainwright the only engine right. I remember he wouldn't take a job running switcher—said a man that didn't know that firing for Jim Wainwright was a better job than running was crazy. What's become of him, Running, I suppose?"

Jim Wainwright put his hand up to his eyes for a minute, and his voice was a little husky as he said:

"No, John, the Kid went away—"

"Went away?"

"Yes, across the Great Divide—dead."

"That's tough," said I, for I saw Jim felt bad. "The Kid and you were like two brothers."

"John, I loved the—"

Then Jim broke down. He got his hat and coat, and said into the air—I feel all choked up here; and I'll tell you a strange, true story—the Kid's story."

As we got out of the crowd and into Boston Common, Jim told his story, and here it is, just as I remember it—and I'm not bad at remembering.

"I'll commence at the beginning, John, so that you will understand. It's a strange story, but when I get through you'll recall enough yourself to prove its truth."

"Before I went beyond the Mississippi and under the shadows of the Rocky Mountains, I fired, and was promoted, on a prairie road in the Great Basin, well known in the railway world. I was much like the rest of the boys until I began to try to get up a substitute for the link machine. I read an article in a self-styled paper from the pen of a jackass, who showed a Corlies engine card and then blackballed the railroad mechanics of America for being satisfied with the link because it was handy. I started in to design a motion to make a card, but—well, you know how good-for-nothing those things are to pull loads with."

"After my first attempt, I put in many nights making a wooden model for the Patent Office. I was subsequently informed that the child of my brain interfered with about ten other motions. Then I commenced to think—which I ought to have done before. I went to studying what had been done, and soon came to the conclusion that I just knew a little—about enough to get along running. I gave up hope of being an inventor and a benefactor of mankind, but study had awakened in me the desire for improvement, and after considerable thought I came to the conclusion that the best thing I could do was to try to be the best runner on the road, just as a starter. In reality, in my inmost soul, my highest ideal was the master mechanic's position."

"I was about 25 years old, and had been running between two or three years, with pretty good success, when one day the general master mechanic sent for me. In the office I was introduced to a man, and the G. M. M. said to him in my presence:

"This is the engineer I spoke to you of. We have no better. I think he would suit you exactly, and when you are through with him, send him back; we are only leading him, mind, and he went out into the shop."

"The meaning of it all was that the stranger represented a firm that had paid up the money to build a locomotive with a motor boiler for burning a patent fuel—she had an improved valve motion, too; and they had asked our G. M. M. for a good engineer to send east and break in and run the new machine and go with her around the country on ten-day trials on the different roads. He offered good pay, it was work I liked, and I went."

"I came right here to Boston and reported to the firm. They were a big concern in another line, and the head of the house was a relative of our G. M. M. that's why he had a chance to send me."

"After the usual introduction, the president said to me:

"Now, Mr. Wainwright, this new engine of ours is hardly started. The drawings are done and the builders' contract is ready to sign, but we want to look over the drawings to see if there are any practical suggestions you can make. Then stay in the shops and see that the work is done right. The inventor is not a practical man; help him if you can, for experience tells us that many things fail because of bad design, where one does because of bad manipulation. Come up into the drawing room, and I will introduce you to the inventor."

"Up under the skylight I met the designer of the new engine, a mild little fellow, but he don't figure in this story. In five minutes I was deep in the study of the drawings. Five minutes seemed to be worked out all right, except that they had the firebox opening the wrong way and the brake valve couldn't be reached—but many a good builder did that 25 years ago. I was impressed with the beauty of the drawings—they were like living men, and once a perspective, was sketched and colored handsomely. I complimented him on them."

"They are beautiful, sir," he said. "They were made by a lady. I'll introduce you to her."

"A bright, plain-faced little woman, with a sunken head looked up from her drawing board as we approached, shook me cordially when introduced, and at once entered into an intelligent discussion of the plans of the new record breaker."

"Well, it was some months before the engine was ready for the road, and in that time I got pretty well acquainted with Miss Reynolds. She was mighty plain, but sharp as a bullet. I don't think she was really happy, but she never went back as 'revel' for her husband. There was something 'fretting' about her appearance—you couldn't help liking her. She was intelligent, and it was such a novelty to find a woman who knew the smoke-stark from the steam chest. I didn't fall in love with her at all, but I liked to talk to her over the work. She told me her story; not all at once, but here and there a piece, until I knew her history pretty well."

"It seems that her father had been chief draftsman of those works for years, but had lately died. She had a strong taste for mechanics, and her father, who believed in women learning trades, had taught her mechanical drawing, first at home, and then in the shop. She had helped in busy times as an extra, but never went to work for regular wages. The death of her father made it necessary."

"She seemed to like to hear stories of the road, and often asked me to tell her some thrilling experience. As second time. Her eyes sparkled and her face kindled when I touched on a snow-bucking experience. She often said that if she was a man she'd go on the railroad, and after such a remark she would usually sigh and smile at the same time. One day when the engine was pretty nearly ready, she said to me:

"Mr. Wainwright, who is going to fire the Experiment?"

"I don't know. I had forgot about that; I'll have to see about it."

"It wouldn't be of much use to get an experienced man, would it—the engine will burn a new fuel in a new way?"

"No," said I, "not much."

"Now, said she, coloring a little, 'let me ask a favor of you. I have a brother who is just crazy to go out firing. I don't want him to go unless it's with a man I can trust; he is young and inexperienced, you know. Would you take him? Please do.'"

"Why, I'll be glad to," said I. "I'll speak to the old man about it."

"Don't tell him it's my brother," "Well, all right."

"The old man told me to hire whoever I liked, and I told Miss Reynolds to bring the boy in the morning."

"When you wait until Monday? It will be an accommodation to me?"

"The next day, Miss Reynolds did not come to the office, and I was busy at the shop. Monday came, but no Miss Reynolds. About nine o'clock, however, the foreman came down to the 'Experiment' with a boy, apparently about 18 years old, and said there was a lad with a note for me."

"Before reading the note I shook hands with the boy, and told him I knew who he was, for he looked like his sister. He was small but wiry and had evidently come prepared for business, as he had some overcoats under his arm and a pair of buckskin gloves. He was bashful and quiet, as boys usually are during their first experience away from home. The note read:

"Dear Mr. Wainwright:—This will be handed you by brother George. I hope you will be satisfied with him. I know he will try to please you and do his duty; don't forget how green he is. I am obliged to go into the country to settle up some of my father's affairs and may not see you again before you go. I sincerely hope the 'Experiment' George, and his experience away from home. ANNA HELD, JR., IN COURT he was at the engine when I got there the next morning.

Anna Held, Jr., better known as Liane Carrera on the stage, has brought court action for an accounting of her famous mother's estate.

"The Kid was such a nice little fellow I liked to have him with me, and somehow or other I hardly noticed it at the time; but he had a good influence on me. In those days I took a drink if I felt like it, but the Kid got me into the habit of drinking lemonade and soda water. He saved me many examples of controlling my temper and when you get in a habit of thinking before I spoke."

"We played horse with that engine for four or five weeks, mostly around town, but I could see it was no go. The patent fuel was no good, and the patent firebox little better, and I advised the firm to put a standard boiler on her and a pair of links, and sell her while the paint was fresh. They took my advice."

"The Kid and I took the engine to Hinley's and left her there; we packed up our overcoats, and as we walked away, the Kid asked: 'What will you do now, Jim?'"

"Oh, I've had a nice play, and I'll go back to the road. I wish you'd go along."

"I wouldn't like anything better; will you take me?"

"Yes, but I ain't sure that I can get you a job right away."

"Well, I could fire for you, couldn't I?"

"I'd like to have you, Kid; but you know I have a regular engine; and a regular fireman. I'll ask for you, though."

"I won't fire for anybody else."

"You won't? What would you do if I should die?"

"Quit."

"Get out!"

"Honest, if I can't fire for you, I won't fire at all."

"I put in a few days around the 'Hub,' and as I had nothing to do, my mind kept turning to Miss Reynolds. I met the Kid daily, and on one of our rambles I asked him where his sister was."

"Out in the country."

"Send word to her that I am going away and want to see her, will you, Kid?"

"Well, yes; but Sis is funny; she's too odd for any use. I don't think she'll come."

"Well, I'll go and see her."

"No Sis would think you were crazy."

"Why, now look here Kid, I like that sister of yours, and I want to see her."

"But the Kid just stopped, leaned against the nearest building, and laughed—laughed until the tears ran down his cheeks. The next day he brought me word that his sister had gone to Chicago to make some sketches for the firm and hoped to come to see us after she was through. I started for Chicago the day following, the Kid with me."

"I had little trouble in getting the Kid on with me, as my old fireman had been promoted. I had a nice room with another plug-puller, and in a few days I was in the old job—except for the Kid. He refused to room with my partner's fireman; and when I talked to him about saving money that way, he said he wouldn't room with any one—not even me. Then he laughed and said he kicked so that he couldn't room with him. The Kid was the last of all the firemen on account of his size, but he kept the cleanest engine, and was never left nor late, and seemed more and more attached to me and I to him."

"Things were going along slick enough when Buddy Daniels had a row with his fireman and our general master mechanic took the matter up. Daniels' fireman claimed the run with me, as he was the oldest man, and as they had an 'oldest man' agreement, the master mechanic ordered Smutty Kelly and the Kid changed."

"I was not in the roundhouse when the Kid was ordered to change, but he went direct to the office and kicked, but to no purpose. Then he came to me."

"Jim, said he, with tears in his eyes, 'are you satisfied with me on the 12?'"

"Why, yes, Kid. Who says I'm not?"

"They've ordered me to change to the 17 with that horrible old ruffian Daniels, and Smutty Kelly to go with you."

"They have?" says I. "That slouch can't go out with me the first time. I'll see the old man."

"But the old man was mad by the time I got to him."

"That baby-faced boy says he won't fire for anybody but you; what have you been putting into his head?"

"Nothing; I've treated him kindly, and he likes me and the 12—that's the cleanest engine on the—"

"Tut, tut, I don't care about that; I've ordered the fireman on the 12 and 17 changed and they are going to be changed."

"The Kid had followed me into the office and at this point said, very respectfully:

"Excuse me, sir, but Mr. Wainwright and I go along so nicely together, Daniels is a bad man, so is Kelly, and neither will get along with decent men. Why can't you—"

"There! stop right there, young man. Now, will you go on the 17 as ordered?"

man. Now, will you go on the 17 as ordered?"

"Yes, if Jim Wainwright runs her."

"No ifs about it; will you go?"

"No, sir, I won't."

"You are discharged, then."

"That fires me, too, said I."

"Not at all, not at all; this is a fireman row, Jim."

"No one but this boy shall put a scoop of coal in the 12 or any other engine for me; I'll take the poorest run you have, but the Kid goes with me."

"Talk was useless, and in the end the Kid and I quit and got our time."

"That evening the Kid came to my room and begged me to take my job back and he would go home; but I wouldn't do it, and asked him if he was sick of me."

"No, Jim," said he. "I live in fear that something will happen to separate us, but I don't want to be a drag on you—I think more of you than anybody."

"They were buying engines by the hundred on the Rio Grande and Santa Fe and the A. & P. In those days, and the Kid and I struck out for the west, and inside of 30 days, we were at work again."

"We had been there three months, I guess, when I got orders to take a new engine out to the front and leave her, bringing back an old one. The last station on the road was in a box-car, thrown out beside the track on a couple of rails. There was one large, rough-board house, where they served rough-and-ready grub and let rooms. The latter were stalls, the partitions being only about seven feet high. It was cold and bleak, but right glad we were to get there and get a warm supper. Everything was rough, but the Kid seemed to enjoy the novelty. After supper I asked the landlord if he could fix us for the night."

"I can fix 'em," he said, "and no more."

"I'll have just one room left. You'll have to double up; but this is the kind of weather for that; it'll be warmer."

"The Kid objected, but the landlord bluffed him—didn't have any other room—and he added: 'If I was your partner there I'd kick 'em down to the tooth, such a cold strip of bacon as ye must be.'"

"About nine o'clock the Kid slipped out, and not coming in for an hour, I went to look for him. As I went toward the engine, I met the watchman:

"Phy don't that fireman o' yours sleep in the house or on the caboose?"

"Up there in that cab with no blankets at all, but when I told him that he politely informed me that he'd known men to get rich minding their own biz. He's a sassy slip of a Yankee."

"I climbed up on the big consolidation, and lighting my torch, looked over the boiler-head at the Kid. He was lying on a board on the seat, with his overcoat for a covering and an armrest for a pillow."

"What's the matter with you, Kid?" I asked. "What are you doing freezing here when we can both be comfortable and warm in the house? Are you ashamed or afraid to sleep with me? I don't like this for a cent."

"I hope you won't be mad with me, Jim, but I won't sleep with any one; there now!"

"You're either a fool or crazy," said I. "Why, you'll half freeze here. I want some explanation of such a trick as this."

"The Kid sat up, looked at me soberly for a few seconds, reached up and unlocked the door, and said:

"Come over and sit down, Jim, and I'll tell you something."

"I blew out the torch and went over, half mad. As I looked the door to keep out the sharp wind, I thought I heard a sob and I took the Kid's head in my hands and turned his face to the moonlight. There were big tears in the corner of each tightly closed eye."

"Don't feel bad, Kid," said I. "I'm sure there's some reason keeps you at such tricks as this; but tell me all your trouble—it's imaginary. I know."

"There was a tremor in the Kid's voice as he took my hand and said: 'We are friends, Jim, ain't we?'"

"Why, of course."

"I have depended on your friendship and kindness and manhood, Jim. It has never failed me yet, and it won't now. I know. I have a secret, Jim, and it gnaws to be but one day, and hides itself the next. Many and many a time I have been on the point of confessing to you, but something held me back. I was afraid you would not let me stay with you. If you knew—"

"Why, you ain't killed any one, Kid, I asked, for I thought he was exaggerating his trouble."

"No—yes, I did, too—I killed my sister."

"I recoiled, hurt, shocked. 'You—'

"Yes, Jim, there is no such person to be found as my sister, Georgiana—for I am she."

"What? Why, Kid, you're crazy."

"No, I'm not. Listen, Jim, and I will explain."
